

Kindergarten English Language Arts

Kindergarten children are immersed in communication, reading and writing through out the day. Literacy activities are both formal and informal, with focus specifically on literacy skills as well as communication, reading and writing in the interest of furthering understanding in other content areas (math, science, social studies, health). The range of ability in kindergarten necessitates a varied approach to literacy. Children participate in English language arts activities in whole group, small group and individual work. Teachers provide children with opportunities to revisit ideas and skills, use literacy-based skills in real-life contexts, and provide them with a many ways to communicate, read and write as they participate in kindergarten activities including art, sensory table play, block building, dramatic play.
